ANNOUNCE GIGANTIC FINNISH OFFENSIVE AT LAKE LADOGA

Germans Also Claim Penetration of Kiev, Capital of Ukraine

AIM AT LENINGRAD

Nazi Mechanized Units Destroy Several Main Red Bunkers, is Claim

By Pierre J. Huss
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

BERLIN, July 14—While military spokesmen claimed German penetration of Kiev, capital of the Ukraine, and predicted its early occupation, the Nazi High Command today announced opening of a gigantic Finnish offensive on both sides of Lake Ladoga.

Personally commanded by Field Marshal Von Mannerheim, chief of the Finnish Defense Council, the drive was aimed at Leningrad and was designed to tie in with a German offensive against the Great Russian citadel from the south.

Nazi mechanized units pushing toward Leningrad are rapidly gaining ground, military quarters said, with several main Red bunkers already destroyed.

The German advance beyond the Dnieper is proceeding on a broad front, it was said. Soviet attempts to make a last stand from trenches in the Vitebsk region were said to have been frustrated with heavy Russian losses.

General staff plans had called for the Finnish offensive to get under way

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT
(Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

Where Leadership Lags

Washington, July 12.

IT is rather one of Mr. Wendell Wilkie's gifts to express what thoughtful Americans have in their minds. If there had been more thoughtful Americans in the last election, he would be leading the nation today instead of supporting its leader. Because, certainly, he got the great bulk of such voters.

BUT there is no point in bringing that up now except to comment upon the most recent demonstration of this ability to interpret informed public opinion. Last week, following his White House conference, Mr. Wilkie said, in effect, that Mr. Roosevelt's foreign policy is sound and good but that his management of defense and domestic affairs is lamentably bad. That just about rings the bell. That is exactly what most of Mr. Roosevelt's fellow-citizens, capable of coherent thought and reasonably posted on the facts, think and feel. The isolationists will dissent, and so will the more radical New Dealers in Washington. But, in the main, that represents the view of most of the reasoning people of the country.

—O—

IT is an entirely just criticism and Mr. Wilkie's wholehearted and invaluable support of the President's words and acts in the foreign field entitle him to make it without the charge of partisan politics or personal prejudice. The essence of his view is, first, that the President at once should take steps to coordinate the defense effort under a single head; second, that he should squelch the attempt of Administration aides to promote radical social and governmental changes behind the screen of the defense program. Failure to do the first has created immense confusion, waste and futility in the defense work; failure to do the second, disconcerts the

MOTHER OF TWO YOUTHFUL SONS KILLED, AND THREE HURT, WHEN AUTO CRASHES INTO PARKED TRUCK

Mrs. Robert Nichol, Philadelphia, Dies of Injuries Received in Crash on Lincoln Highway — Husband, Driver of the Car, Blames Faulty Brakes—Sister of Woman Killed Resides in Bristol

A mother of two sons, eight and six years old respectively, was killed early yesterday morning when the car in which she was riding and which was driven by her husband, crashed into a parked truck.

The woman fatally injured was Mrs. Helen Marie Nichol, 31, wife of Robert Nichol, Vici street, Philadelphia. The deceased is the sister of Mrs. Dominick Martino, 217 Franklin street, Bristol.

Nichol was arrested by Private Newton, Penna. Motor Police, Oxford Valley barracks. Nichol, after receiving hospital treatment at the Nazareth Hospital, Philadelphia, was brought to the Bristol Municipal Building, where he was held until yesterday afternoon, when he was released in $2,000 bail to await the action of the coroner.

Nichol's car, in which he, his wife, his step-brother, Joseph Mangan and his wife, Mary, Paul street, Philadelphia, crashed into the rear of a Horlacher truck operated by Martin Childs, Washington avenue, Bayonne, N. J.

Nichol suffered bruises of the face (and body; Mrs. Nichol died of a fractured skull; Joseph Mangan sustained contusions of the lower spine; Mary Mangan sustained fractured upper jaw and possible brain concussion. The injured were all treated at the Nazareth Hospital where Mrs. Nichol died upon admittance.

Both Nichol and Martin were given a hearing before Justice of Peace John Brennan, Trevese, and held in $2,000 bail each.

Nichol, in describing the accident, stated that he and his wife and his step-brother, Mangan, and his wife, left Philadelphia at about nine o'clock Saturday night, to take a ride. Miss Clara Mangan and a male friend, in another car, accompanied the Nichols' party. When the accident happened, Miss Mangan and her friend were some distance ahead of the Nichol car, but they are reported to have heard the crash and returned to the scene to find the other members of their party involved in the crash. Mangan was married two weeks ago.

Nichol said that Saturday morning he had his car tested and inspected, but that the brakes heated up and he blamed faulty action of the brakes for the accident.

Nichol is employed at the Hunter Manufacturing Company, in Bristol.

The four persons had driven out the boulevard and were returning to Philadelphia at about two o'clock yesterday morning when the accident occurred. Nichol stated that he saw "three flares ahead but that his brakes did not work properly." The Nichol car crashed into the standing truck on Janney Hill, Route 1, near Parkland. The Nichol car was wrecked.

WILL HISTORY REPEAT?

There are several parallels between Hitler's invasion of Russia and that of Napoleon 129 years ago. When Napoleon ventured into Russia he, too, was trying to blockade England by conquering all Europe. Early in his wars Napoleon made an alliance with Russia, which cooled when the partners were unable to agree on the division of Turkey.

In 1812 Napoleon had assembled the greatest army the world had seen up to that time. He started a final campaign against Russia on June 24. Hitler began his thrust on June 22. Under the Russian strategy of retreat the front widened from 135 to 160 miles and Napoleon's forces dwindled from 363,000 to 229,000 in five weeks.

When Napoleon occupied the burning city of Moscow, his army was spread over a triangle with the sides totaling 570 miles. In the subsequent battle of Maloyaroslavetz the French were badly beaten.

Forced to retreat, Napoleon soon found winter a worse enemy than the Cossacks. His army, decimated to 50,000 before winter struck, completely disintegrated and Napoleon fled to Paris. Three years later, his prestige gone, a new army was not able to save him from defeat by the British at Waterloo.

WEATHER LEGEND

Tomorrow will be Saint Swithin's Day. If rain falls—but then everybody should know the legend, after a thousand years. In spite of repeated weather records which tell of rain many times within forty days of a dry Saint Swithin's, and drought after a fair one, the tradition clings. Saint Swithin's Day, if thou dost rain.

For forty days it will remain; Saint Swithin's Day, if thou be fair, For forty days twill rain nae mair.

Swithin was bishop of Winchester. This devout man was beloved of King Egbert, under whom England was united, and tutored the king's son, Ethelwold. Swithin accompanied Ethelwold's son, Alfred, at the time of the Great, to Rome. It was Swithin who persuaded the English kings to tithe, setting aside a tenth of the income from their lands for the church.

When Swithin died in 862 he was buried at his own request outside the church, but on July 15, 871, the monks removed his body to the choir.

The legend of fair or wet weather following his day in the calendar is thought to have sprung either from the fact that rain dripped from the church eaves on his grave, causing the monks to decide to bring his bones inside, or from the weather on the day when the removal took place. Anyhow, there it is.

But it doesn't affect the meteorologists who look after American weather officially, using the most advanced scientific instruments. In fact, it doesn't affect the weather, but it's something to write about.

Hitler probably calls it a "holly" war because he plans to leave Europe full of holes.

American-made French planes are reported to be fighting American-made British planes in Siberia, and if this country could have rushed the stuff there last year, American-made equipment would now be used by the Finns to aid Hitler in fighting the Russians.

ECHOES OF THE PAST

By Courier Staff Member

Review of the news as it appeared in the Bucks County Gazette issue dated at Bristol Oct. 16, 1879. The Gazette, a weekly newspaper published in Bristol, was discontinued following its merger with the Courier.

The pedestrian fever has been a long while in catching this neighborhood, but it reached here last week and developed into a walking match at Wheatshaf on Saturday afternoon. From Bristol about 260 persons went up to witness the contest, which to those to whom pedestrianism has charms, was full of interest. The competitors in the race were W. H. Butler, Howard Williams, Andrew Armstrong, J. McBride, John Cornish (colored), J. P. Collins, Caspar R. White and E. Prickett. The course was around the Wheatshaf race track, which is estimated to be half a mile in circumference. At 25 minutes of four o'clock, the eight men started around the circle, and until the finish just two hours later, the scene was quite a lively one. At the end of his fifth mile Armstrong withdrew. The others kept on mile after mile, first one leading then another. Williams and Cornish soon showed that they were no ordinary walkers, or rather runners. Cornish especially developed a rate of speed entirely unexpected by the spectators. He might be called a sable Watson, for during the time he was going round the track he was continually up to some sort of monkey shine. He would get ahead of all the others, and then crouch and dance around the track, sit down and wait for his rivals to catch up to him, then away he would go and take the lead again. This was his style of performance throughout the contest. When the two hours were up, at 25 minutes of six, a pistol shot was fired and the race was over with only four of the walkers. Cornish, Williams, White and McBride on the track. Cornish, the colored man, was declared the winner, having accomplished 13½ miles. Williams came second with 12½ miles to his credit, while White was close behind, his record being 12½. The prizes were three silver goblets.

Councilman Booz suggested a new borough office at the last council meeting—that of street commissioner, to prevent fast driving, and keep order generally.

A six days' walking match is being arranged. The participants will be Andrew O'Donnell, Andrew Armstrong, and James Dougherty. It will take place at the Pine street Academy. The admission fee will be three pence, and the winner of the race will be given the proceeds.

Twenty-five sheep which were stolen from Jesse Harper near Fallsington, yesterday morning, were recovered near Holmesburg. It is reported also that the thief has been captured.

The street oil lamps will go out, and a patent gas arrangement take their places. It is presumed the latter will not go out (of use), as long as they burn brightly.

The enthusiastic No. 2 boys sounded the gong of their truck so enthusiastically that it was cracked by the hammer, on Tuesday night, when the fire bell rang.

As long ago as 1746, the citizens of Wrightstown petitioned the court against the further increase of taverns in their midst.—(Democrat). And the people of the county are still petitioning.

Borough council met as usual on Monday evening. . . . H. M. Wright, being exercised over the cost to the borough for burying the poor, the poor committee was instructed to ascertain a regular price for which coffins could be obtained.

An appropriation of $100 was made for putting in the Mulberry street culvert, and $100 to pay the expense of putting in the heater in the fire company's building.

A petition from the American Hook and Ladder Company was presented, asking that a suitable building be put up for the company.

A proposition from the Pennsylvania Gaslight Company to replace the street oil lamps by a patent gas burner for $18 per annum per post was accepted, to go into effect after November 1st.

citizens and tends to prevent their unification.

THESE allegations and suggestions, of course, are not new, but every time they are made there appears more concrete evidence to sustain them. For example, it was clear that when Mr. Willkie repeated them he had in mind—for one thing the pending bill by which 3½ additional billions in taxes are to be taken from about six million persons. None of these has any reason to complain about the heaviness of this taxation. The taxes are needed for defense. Big increases are inevitable and it is right to impose them. What is not right, however, is that the bill should be framed along the old demagogic, political line, that, under the guidance of Administration politicians, it should avoid the obviously fair and clearly desirable method of broadening the base by lowering the exemptions, thus bringing into the taxpaying group millions who never have paid any direct tax at all—but should.

INSTEAD, they have chosen to impose practically back-breaking rates upon the moderate-income groups, climaxing this injustice by the adoption of a provision compelling husband and wife to make joint rather than separate returns, which change again lands heaviest upon the groups which, for the obvious reason that their voting strength is not great, have been singled out as the chief victims. Twice since the New Deal began, this joint-return scheme has been passed by the House, killed in the Senate. Now, utilizing the national emergency, a more serious effort is being made to put through what is really an indefensible proposal. The fact that it penalizes matrimony, encourages celibacy, promotes divorce and denies to women that equality in property rights for which they have been fighting so long—none of these appear to weigh against the opportunity of putting the pincers on the class to which the New Deal is inherently hostile.

IT is not surprising that Mr. Willkie refers to the proposal as out of the "dark ages." It is not surprising that he should call upon the President, for the sake of national unity, to supply a leadership that will protect citizens from this kind of injustice and dispel the notion that the crisis is being used to promote ends not remotely connected with the defeat of Hitler but cherished very dearly by the radical young theorists, with their pear-shaped heads, who for eight years have been trying to make over the American system to conform with their warped ideas. A shining illustration is to be found in the National Youth Administration. Logically, the selective draft, coupled to the ease with which youths from 17 to 24 can now get jobs, compared to the difficulties in previous years, would seem to indicate sharp curtailment in NYA activities and expenditures.

THE reverse has happened. Instead of curtailing, the NYA is expanding. Instead of less money, it is spending more. Instead of taking youths off the rolls, the NYA is out offering inducements to get on. In one State bonuses in the shape of credits, amounting to $2, are paid NYA enrollees for every recruit they turn in. In Maryland, the local administrators boast that "employment on youth projects" has increased from 2,905 to 4,906 in four months. New schemes have been inaugurated which conflict with the vocational training programs of the State public education system. New ways of spending money are being devised. Publicity promoting these flows out in an increasing stream.

IT is all being done under the guise of aiding in the defense program. Actually, it is an effort to so deeply entrench the NYA that hereafter its permanence will not be in doubt, the size of its appropriations be unquestioned and the extremely radical individuals who dominate and direct it be in position to enter fully the new fields into which they are beginning to push. Attention badly needs to be called to these things and the lack of leadership which makes them possible. Burdened as he is, the President ought to find the time, as Mr. Willkie suggests, to impose restraint upon the more eager and ambitious of these "social gainers"—at least while the "unlimited emergency" lasts.

Did Samson Feast On A Lion With Stomach Ulcer Pains?

The Bible tells us how Samson feasted on a lion. It isn't likely that he could have done so if he suffered after-eating pains. Those who are distressed with stomach or ulcer pains, indigestion, gas, pain, heartburn, burning sensation, bloating and other conditions caused by excess acid should try a 25c box of Udo's Tablets. They melt in the stomach, are refunded. At United Cut Rate and drug stores everywhere.—(Advertisement)

PUPPET LOVE by Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr.

SYNOPSIS

In all his twenty-four years, Christopher Allen Bishop had stood in awe of his family name and all it represented—bluebloods and millions! But today, he had gotten fed up with the whole artificial set-up, given up his $25-a-week "job," sent a farewell note to his aristocratic mother, and started out on his own in a roadster he had won in a radio contest. On the road to adventure, he picks up Joe Kane, a hitch-hiker. Against Joe's better judgment, they stop at a questionable luncheon where Christopher's pocket is picked. The latter retrieves his wallet but a free-for-all ensues, with Christopher and Joe the victors. The boys part company in Joe's home-town of Cressville but, before leaving, Joe gives Christopher a card advertising "Kamp Kosy Komfort" saying, "This is where I'll be. If you need a friend just yell for Joe." Driving along, the squealing strains of an organ came to Christopher. Could that bleating be "The Blue Danube"? His ear for harmony outraged. Christopher goes in search of the "musician," and finds himself at a "Society Circus for the Benefit of Children's Hospital." On the side-lines, he comes upon a shabby trailer on the back of which a marionette show is being given; a satire on the rich with a society butterfly prouetting in a dizzy whirl. From inside the trailer comes that awful organ noise. Christopher contrives to meet "Nicky," the producer of the show, an attractive, curly-haired, blue-eyed girl. Nicky explains that she runs the show by herself and the raucous music he heard came from a melodeon attached to her car motor. Within the motor mimes, so does the music box; hence the escapology. Nicky mistakes Christopher for one of the directors of the benefit, but he hastily explains that he abhors such gatherings. Learning that Nicky shares his feelings, Christopher invites her to dinner. He offers to help her couple her car and trailer.

CHAPTER SIX

Nicky led the way around the trailer to a car parked at the rear. Christopher thought of it in the past tense. It was not a model T by any generation!

"It goes?" he asked doubtfully. "You heard it," Nicky said, climbing into the driver's seat to demonstrate. It went, but with the most violent symptoms of rheumatism and asthma.

"It's a bit old," he commented nervously, as she backed closer to the trailer.

"We were raised together from pups," she called, doing some adroit manipulating to bring the car in line with her puppet show home.

A few moments later, from a strategic point beneath the trailer, Christopher sweated and struggled with the spare wheel which was to be taken off and the coupling which was to be fastened. And while his broad shoulders never sagged under economic strain, he had done more than a usual share of wrestling, boxing, and gymnastics. But now the arduous task of shifting and coupling a trailer had him sweating. He marvelled at Nicky. How under heaven could she do it?

When he asked her about it, the trailer finally hitched safely to the car, and Christopher wiping perspiration from his face, Nicky shrugged:

"I don't know. I sort of prop up a slide with a stick and pull it coupling nearer with a piece of chain and then I kick the wheel from under. . . . Oh, I manage," she finished, Christopher's marvel only increased at this first lesson in woman's idea of mechanics.

"But how about the dinner?" he insisted, following her to the car. "I can't go out to dinner," she shook her head. "I've got to take this outfit to Green Grove. I found a garage mechanic at the tourist camp who is good. I'm playing down near Baltimore tomorrow afternoon, and I've got to get an early start."

"But you still must eat," Christopher insisted. Nicky, tying a bandana around her curls and achieving a rakish effect without the aid of a mirror, seemed to consider the remark.

"You have been awfully sweet," she agreed. "If you want to come to Green Grove, you can have supper with me in the trailer, while the car's being fixed. They have free showers down there, too."

Young Bishop liked it even more when he carried water for Nicky.

Christopher flushed. "I do need one rather badly, and I'd love to come. You lead on and I'll be right after you."

By the time Nicky had swung the cumbersome trailer out of the driveway, Christopher was in his car, all set to follow. Nicky drove back across the river and through the town where Christopher had left Joe. Suddenly he remembered about the tourist camp near Baltimore, and Joe's card in his pocket. Why, perhaps Nicky might go right past that place. He wondered if Joe was going to hitch-hike to his new job or if he had a lift. This time the day before he would not have realized those things could be problems to people, just as he hadn't realized that a girl might travel around the country with a sort of combined home-and-profession on wheels.

But there she was. The tar paper on the trailer gleamed a lovely purple touched with small pools of gold in the sunset. The red was where it was patched with tin.

In half an hour the trailer wobbled and veered as the car pulled it off the road and into a wide cleared space in the grove. Green Grove Tourist Camp—Welcome! read the sign over the drive. Christopher followed the trailer to a stop at the end of the clearing.

While Nicky went into a huddle with the mechanic, Christopher explored. It was quite a place. Small cabins could be rented in prices ranging from 50c to $2.00 a night. Trailer parking, including use of light and water, and all facilities, $1.00 a night. Special rates by the week.

Whole families were gathered about outdoor tables, coffee and steaks and soup sizzled on the stoves. Laundry flapped on several lines strung from parked trailers to neighboring trees. Radios added sound and fury to the scene. Everybody smiled at Christopher. He liked it.

Young Bishop liked it even more when he carried water for Nicky, helped drop the sides of her incredible trailer. It was a new aroma to Christopher. A blend of pines and coffee and bacon, with a thread of gasoline throughout, but he liked that too. He likewise enjoyed the shower, a mere box of a compartment for the use of which one waited in line at that hour of day.

In clean linen, his dark brown hair flattened in order, he felt splendently alive—and terribly hungry.

He went striding toward the trailer as though it were a mirage that might fade before he reached it. Twilight had come. Nicky's hurricane lamp gleamed a bright welcome. The small side table was spread with a red table cover and paper napkins and a type of dishes never seen in the Bishop home—bright blue and rather frail looking. Out of a sudden wave of embarrassment, as he stood stoop shouldered the dishes gratefully. He'd been raised to china, the ordering of a meal and proper service.

"Everything looks grand, Nicky, and those dishes—they are attractive."

"I like them," she flung over her shoulder from the stove where she was stirring something. "They're pretty thin for trailer travel, but I can't bear thick dishes. I suppose it's the lady in me. Anyway, those cost only a nickel apiece. So I figured if I could afford anything to eat, I could spare fifteen or twenty cents for the dishes to put it on!"

Fifteen or twenty cents! Never, since he was in college trying to budget his dollar allowance, had Christopher heard such small sums spoken of so seriously.

"I hope you'll like this," Nicky continued, turning from the stove, and Christopher gazed admiringly. She, too, had most evidently visited a shower. Her dark, curly hair was still damp, her skin was lovely, catching a golden sheen in the lamp light.

Her fresh blouse with its sailor collar gave a new angle to the lovely lines of her throat. She was much, much prettier than he'd first thought her—and younger too. Twenty-two at tops!

Here's How To Get Milk In Your Diet

WITH the nation engaged in a gigantic defense effort, the American housewife can play her part by feeding her family correctly and the Bureau of Home Economics, U. S. Department of Agriculture, has issued a leaflet "Eat the Right Food to Help Keep You Fit," available for 3 cents from the Superintendent of Documents in Washington, containing the "Nutrition Yardstick" approved at the recent National Nutrition Conference. The importance of milk—one quart a day for a growing child and a pint or more for an adult—is stressed, and the above photo illustrates how you can eat as well as drink it. Chocolate pudding, ice cream, cottage cheese-tomato salad, and pretzels custards you know about—here are recipes for the other three:

Shrimps Galatoire
2 5¼-ounce jars shrimps
3 tbsps. butter, melted
2½ tbsps. flour
¼ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. garlic salt
1 pepperconce, finely crushed
Dash of Tabasco
½ tsp. grated onion
2 tbsps. prepared mustard
2 cups hot milk, scalded
1 large pimiento, chopped
½ cup chopped sweet pickles
Dash of Tabasco
6 croutades

Wash shrimps and remove black line along the back. Blend butter and flour; add seasonings and mix thoroughly. Add to milk in top of double boiler. Cook over boiling water about 10 minutes, or until mixture thickens, stirring constantly. Add shrimps and cook 5 minutes longer, or until thoroughly heated. Add pimiento and pickles. Serve in croutades or in nest of rice. Yield: 6 portions.

Cheese Soup Supreme
2 tbsps. butter
3 tbsps. flour
½ cup Old English cheddar, cubed
3 cups hot milk
¼ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
¼ tsp. Worcestershire sauce
1 cup chopped dill pickles
1 pimiento, chopped
2 tbsps. chopped parsley
Melt butter in top of double boiler and stir in flour. Add cheese and 1 cup of the milk. Place over boiling water and cook until thickened and smooth, stirring constantly. Add remaining milk, salt, pepper, and Worcestershire sauce. Turn heat to low so that water does not boil. Re-heat. Add pickles, pimiento, and parsley, and serve immediately. This soup is equally delicious when chilled. Yield: 6 portions.

Potpourri Chicken Pies
2½-ounce jar dried beef, cut in pieces
3 tbsps. butter
3 cups milk
2½ cups milk
Slowly sauté dried beef in 3 tablespoons butter until crisp and browned. Stir in flour. Add milk and cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Add chicken and peas. Line individual casseroles with mashed potatoes and fill centers with chicken mixture. Force mashed potatoes through a pastry bag to make fluted border around edge of each casserole and initial in center. Brush with melted butter. Bake in moderately hot oven (375° F.) about 30 minutes, or until browned. Approximate yield: 6-8 pies.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was attired in a white French marquisette gown, it having a fitted bodice, long sleeves puffed to the elbow and fitted at the wrist. Their gowns were fashioned like that of the maid of honor, and each wore white slippers. Miss Whitlock, Miss Barr and Mrs. Rollar are cousins of the bride.

The shepherdess was Miss Barbara Ann York, of Glenside, who was attired in orchid-toned organdy. She carried a shepherdess crook, and wore a wreath of flowers on her hair. Serving the groom as best man was his cousin, Sargent Harry MacNamara, Elkins Park; and ushers were Messrs. William Carter, Roslyn, cousin of the bride; Frank Whillick, Jr., Burholme; Charles Hutchinson and Wilbur Francis, of Mayfair.

The bride's mother was attired in a pink street-length dress with white accessories, and wore a corsage of sweetheart roses.

The groom's gift to the bride was a single strand of pearls, and to his attendants he gave gold initialed tie sets. The bride's gift to the groom was a marcasite initialed tie set. To her attendants she presented gold pins with floral centers, encircled with stones.

For her honeymoon trip the former Miss Andrew was attired in a plaid sharkskin suit, and white accessories. Upon their return, Mr. and Mrs. Knoll will reside with Mrs. Knoll's parents.

O most loving Father, bestow upon us that living, daring faith that casts aside all doubt and fear and causes us to depend solely upon the saving grace of Jesus Christ. Deliver us from dependence upon physical strength; from the conclusions of any mental gymnastics which do not take into account the eternal power of God. May the strength of Christ be added to every equation of our lives, thereby making all things possible unto them that believe. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

ON THE SCREENS

GRAND THEATRE

Hats off to Alexander Korda and to brilliant co-stars Vivien Leigh and Laurence Olivier for bring to the screen one of the most outstanding pictures of the last ten years—"That Hamilton Woman!" which was presented last night at a gala premiere at the Grand Theatre. Produced on a lavish scale, "That Hamilton Woman!" brings to moviegoers everywhere one of the great romances of all time, the love story of Lady Hamilton and Lord Nelson.

As portrayed by Vivien Leigh and Olivier, these two exciting characters come to life on celluloid and reach a new high in dramatic interpretation. Miss Leigh is of course superb as that exciting beauty of her day, Emma Hamilton, who was painted 40 times by the great portrait painter, Romney. Olivier is seen in the role of the hero of Trafalgar.

BRISTOL THEATRE

Excitingly reunited in George Stevens' "Penny Serenade," Irene Dunne and Cary Grant returned to the Bristol Theatre screen yesterday in what has been acclaimed by Hollywood as the greatest romantic drama of the year. Vivid, absorbing story of an errant newspaperman and his wife, "Penny Serenade" is based upon Martha Cheavens' magazine novel.

As the reporter Grant has been paraded for a performance which tops in sincerity, in gay good humor and dramatic content anything he has done in recent years.

FASHION PARADE

By Orry-Kelly

(Famous Hollywood Style Writing For International News Service)

HOLLYWOOD—(INS)—If I were to choose the single most potent word to describe a personal preference in feminine clothes, "casualness" would be that word. Many women may immediately misinterpret my meaning and conclude that I am talking about the virtues of looking "careless," but there is a great difference between careless dressing, which has no virtue, and casual dressing, which has many virtues. For casual attire, to be smartly so, must be "studied."

Suppose you are planning a day at Catalina with Bette Davis. You will first see your entire ensemble in imagination as Bette will because perfect costumes are always well planned, and unless you're an oddity you will want to be comfortable, but as neat as the proverbial pin. Then you will want to act comfortable. You'll have to if you want to keep up with Bette who never wears anything that makes her self-conscious. Last of all you'll want to look comfortable. How is all this comfort achieved if it doesn't involve a bit of carelessness? Like this. Once you have donned your clothes, study yourself in the mirror. If you can honestly tell yourself that you look perfect proceed then to forget all about what you are wearing. In other words, you have been so meticulous, even to the stuffing of a dainty handkerchief in a breast pocket or the tying of a handkerchief, scarf around your head, you can now set forth for the day with

Event Was the First to Determine Who Will Drive in Big Race

Suffering contusions of the back and left arm, Sam Moody, Richmond, Va., is in the Harriman Hospital as the result of a crash during the qualifying events at the Langhorne Speedway track yesterday afternoon.

Moody, who complained of considerable pain during the night, is to have X-rays taken today, so extent of his injuries may be determined.

Luck rode with drivers when three of the four drivers who demolished their stock cars in a qualifying event accident escaped serious injury.

Two others, Ace Levis, Dorchester, Mass., and Leon McBride, Trenton, were released from the Mercer Hospital in Trenton after receiving medical treatment.

Another driver, Bud Van Houten, crashed his car through a guard rail and the machine rolled down an embankment. Van Houten did not require medical attention and walked away from his wrecked car.

The qualifying event yesterday was the first to determine the 40 starters in the 200-mile stock car event next Sunday at Langhorne. Another set of qualifying tests will be held Saturday afternoon.

The Finns will handle the northern part of the claw while German troops operate east and west from the Lake Pelpus region.

Except for announcing start of the Finnish offensive, the High Command merely said that all operations on the eastern front were proceeding "according to plan." But military spokesmen said that all reports from the front indicated that the whole gigantic Soviet army was gradually crumbling.

Storm Causes Fire and Street Damage at Newtown

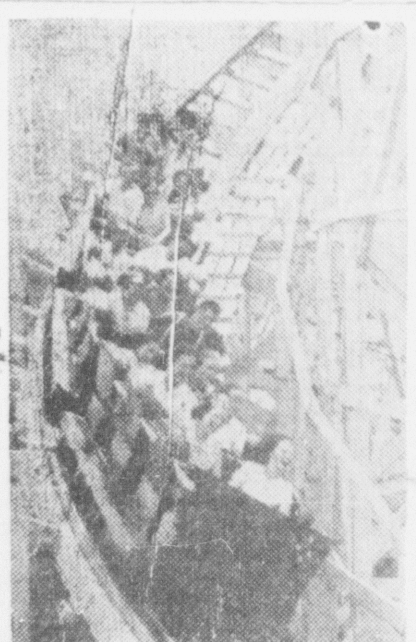

NEWTOWN, July 14—An electrical storm which brought torrential rains to this section Saturday evening, caused the firing of a large barn, with loss estimated at $5000 to $6000; and considerable damage to streets in the borough, with highway workers being kept busy today clearing mud from the thoroughfares.

The fire occurred at the farm of Leonard Cooper, Richboro Road, Northampton Township, 1½ miles west of this borough. At the time the lightning struck, in the midst of the down-pour, the two horses were in pasture, and no other livestock was in the structure. The stone walls were left standing, but the super-structure, which contained quantities of hay, etc., was destroyed. The hay smoldered throughout yesterday, and continued today to burn. At one time last evening firemen were summoned a second time, to quench fire in the mass.

Two buildings, one located on either side of the barn, were saved, they being drenched by the heavy rain. Newtown, Richboro and other fire companies answered the alarm.

A number of streets and culverts in the borough were damaged, as well as those in the nearby area. Sycamore street, at the west of Newtown, was under about two feet of water, the water from Newtown Creek reaching the doors of Lowmes Garage, at Sycamore street and Washington avenue. On the Yardley Road, dirt from sloping farms was washed onto the thoroughfare, and highway workmen were dispatched to the scene to clean the highway. Heavy flow of water also ripped a section of street along the gutter at Chancellor and Washington streets, damaging a section about five feet square.

Churchill Rejects Any Peace Offer Made By Hitler

London, July 14—Prime Minister Churchill today rejected any peace Hitler might offer if and when he conquers Soviet Russia.

Addressing 5,000 civil defense workers in Hyde Park, Churchill said:

"We will have no truce with Hitler or with the grizzly gang who did Hitler's wicked worst."

Churchill's address for the most part dealt with the vital role played by civilian defense workers in "rescuing" London after each successive attack by the German Air Force.

He predicted that mass Nazi raids would be resumed shortly and expressed firm conviction that London's 250,000 air raid precautions and fire workers would pitch in again as they have in the past to preserve this city as a vast and modern "center of civilization."

Churchill paid tribute to the "varied, complex, sensitive and severe society" which he said Britain had evolved over the centuries.

"How capable it is," he exclaimed, "of withstanding the most prodigious, the most unexpected and most fractious strains."

PASTOR CUTS SERMON

HILLSBORO, N. H.—(INS)—Rev. Frank A. Coad, pastor of Smith Memorial Church had to cut down a two-hour sermon to a maximum reading time of 30 minutes in order to keep parishioners happy. The modern sermon lasts only 20 to 30 minutes. Parishioners asked Rev. Coad to preach one of the sermons left by former pastor Rev. Jonathan Barnes, delivered when the two-hour lectures were in fashion. As a result the editing was necessary in order to give parishioners what they wanted without forcing them to sit still for two hours.

Defenders Like These Papers, Army Men Say

Nothing makes a selective service man in camp happier than a letter from home or a home-town newspaper in the daily mail, army officials said recently after an extensive survey.

Next in order, the selective service youth likes sweets such as candy, cookies and chocolates—and chewing gum!

Officers say that on the march the gum helps keep the boys from drinking too much water and from dipping into their lunch ration.

Other offerings which bring a smile of pleasure to the enrollee include a general repertoire of utilities among which are books of stamps, flashlights, a towel now and then, toilet articles, and reading materials.

Officers say that if relatives want to be sure their addressee gets what's mailed to him, they should address the letter or package in this way: Name first, his company or battery second, his regiment third, and, lastly the name of the post office.
